

Status of the Veterans To Receive Bonus Now On the City Relief Rolls

Local Board Votes That Only 60 Per Cent of the Bonus Shall Now Be Considered as Financial Assets.

THE STATEMENT

Local Emergency Relief Bureau Issues Statement Clarifying Status of Veterans on Relief.

The local ERB has issued a statement clarifying the status of World War veterans who will receive their bonus next week. The State TERA has ruled that the bonus shall be considered as an asset and that their names shall be removed from the relief rolls.

The local ERB, however, has unanimously adopted a resolution to the effect that only 60 per cent of the amount received by a veteran as a bonus should be considered as an asset and the balance of 40 per cent may be disposed of as they decide shall be for the best interest of themselves and families.

The statement, which should be carefully read by veterans on the relief rolls of the city, follows:

Emergency Relief Bureau, Kingston, N. Y., June 13, 1936.

In order to clarify the status of World War veterans who are receiving home relief, the following statement has been issued by the Local Emergency Relief Bureau:

The following ruling has been made by the New York State Temporary Emergency Relief Administration:

"The New York State Temporary Emergency Relief Administration on June 5 issued a statement clarifying the status of veterans on home relief, who will receive federal bonuses."

"The TERA has not changed the regulation that has governed relief since the establishment of the Temporary Emergency Relief Administration in 1931—that all resources must be taken into account before public funds are drawn upon for support. This is the plain intent of the Wicks Act and the legislature at its recent session made no amendments in this regard."

"Adjustments of veterans' bonuses, as in the case of any other resources, will be made by local relief authorities within the provisions of the Public Welfare Law and the Wicks Act."

"The TERA ruling does not apply to veterans eligible for bonuses on WPA or other federal programs or projects where the policy in such matters is determined by federal and not state law."

The above ruling applies to the issuance of relief by all municipalities within the state which are operating under the Wicks Act and which receive 40 per cent reimbursement from the state on their relief expenditures.

This ruling applies to all veterans who are receiving home relief and their cases will therefore be closed by the Emergency Relief Bureau. However, the commissioners of the Local Emergency Relief Bureau unanimously adopted a resolution to the effect that only 60 per cent of the amount received by a veteran as a bonus shall be considered as assets and will be applied against their current budget. The balance of the bonus, 40 per cent, to be disposed of as they decide, shall be for the best interests of themselves and families.

As an example: If a veteran received $100 in cash as a bonus, 60 per cent, or $60 must be applied to his weekly budget until that sum is used up before again being eligible for relief. The remaining 40 per cent, or $40, can be used to pay outstanding bills, to purchase new clothing and household supplies, or whatever the family may decide for which to spend the money.

The annual Ulster County Fair will be held in Kingston on September 25 and 26. This was decided at a meeting of the Ulster County Agricultural Society held earlier in the week. The executive committee of the society will meet again Monday evening to revise the premium list, and to make arrangements for holding the fair here. The site for the fair will also be selected at that time.

The reason for holding the fair the latter part of September rather than the latter part of August was the fact that September would be a better time for all the agricultural exhibits.

Just where the fair will be held has not been fully decided as yet. Last year the fair was held in the new armory. Some of the members of the society it is said, favor holding an outdoor fair this year, but it is expected that a decision in the matter will be reached by the executive committee, who have been authorized to fix the place for holding the fair.

Whether the fair is held indoors or outdoors, however, it will be staged in this city.

Kingsley said a man told him two years ago that he had been forced to join the Black Legion at the point of a gun, and revealed details of the fearsome ritual. He said he advised him to tell his story to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Four Bus Lines Granted Petition For Change of Route to New Terminal

Common Council In Special Session on Friday Evening Officially Recognizes New Bus Terminal on North Front Street.

TWO TERMINALS

Proposed Changes in Routes Must Now Be Approved by Public Service Commission.

The uptown business section of Kingston is now served by two terminals, one on Crown street, where a bus terminal has been maintained for many years, and the other on the Aduchelsky property on North Front street, across the street from the Salvation Army headquarters. Just how long the two terminals will be maintained is a question that remains to be answered.

The new bus terminal on North Front street was officially recognized as such when the common council meeting in special session Friday evening at the city hall unanimously granted the petition of the Eagle Bus Line, Woodstock-Kingston Bus Line, Pine Hill-Kingston Bus Line and the Hudson Transit Corporation to change their routes so that they could use the new terminal. The proposed change in routes will now have to be approved by the State Public Service Commission.

It is said that six of the 11 bus lines that enter the city are now using the new bus terminal and that the other five bus lines are using the Crown street terminal.

How the second bus terminal in the uptown section came into existence is an interesting story. For years a bus terminal had been maintained on Crown street on the property of the old Van Roes Hotel, and it was still continued when the old hotel, which for years previous had been known as the Kingston Hotel, was torn down.

The old hotel property was acquired by the Metropolitan Insurance Company, and some time ago the insurance company representatives barred the use of the property as a bus terminal, which situation left the uptown business section without a bus terminal.

It was then that Philip Aduchelsky approached members of the Uptown Business Men's Association and said he was willing to lease the North Front street property for use as a bus terminal provided it met with the approval of the business men. The proposition did, and Mr. Aduchelsky then went ahead and leased the property and began the work of grading it so that busses could use it for terminal purposes.

Shortly after Mr. Aduchelsky leased the North Front street property and began getting it ready for a bus terminal, Frederick Illert of Crown street entered into a lease with the insurance company to take over the Crown street property and use it as a bus terminal as it had been in the past.

Thus it was that the bus committee later had two propositions before it for consideration, and after giving the matter much thought the bus committee reported in favor of a change of routes of bus lines so that the North Front street terminal could be used. The report was adopted by the common council.

Since the adoption of the report four of the bus lines 60 as to be able to use the new terminal, and earlier this week the bus committee held a public hearing on the petitions, and Friday evening the council met in special session to take action on the petitions.

The common council has no authority, it is said, to designate a bus terminal, and its only powers are to designate what streets a bus line may use in entering and leaving the city.

With two bus terminals in operation it is not known what action the council will take, if any, in the matter, and probably the entire matter will be left open until it is even what the public service commission takes on the applications of the four bus lines for changes in their routes.

Landon to Launch Campaign "Right Now" Following Knox Arrival at Topeka Monday

STATE HOUSE DECORATED FOR LANDON

The Kansas State House at Topeka was decked out in holiday attire for the celebration of the nomination of Gov. Alf M. Landon for the presidency. Here is the capitol bathed in floodlights after word was flashed to Topeka that Kansas' chief executive had been nominated. (Associated Press Photo.)

Kansas Governor Expresses High Delight Over Selection of Hamilton as Chairman of Republican National Committee.

FAIR FIGHT

Landon Says Manager Is Hard, Fair Fighter; Landon Will Invade Enemy Territory.

Topeka, Kas., June 13 (AP)—Eager for a "fighting" campaign, Gov. Alf M. Landon proposed today to launch the Republican battle for the presidency "right now."

Hardly recovered from the hoarseness of acknowledging a deluge of congratulations to his nomination, the Kansas awaited only the arrival Monday of his running mate, Col. Frank Knox, with members of the party's national subcommittee, to chart plans for pointing the party "along the road to victory" in November.

The governor's aggressive mood was reflected in a statement expressing delight over the selection of John D. Hamilton, leader of his forces at Cleveland, as chairman of the Republican national committee.

Hard, Fair Fighter

"He is a hard fighter but he always fights fairly," Landon said. "As Kansas who have fought with him or against him will be equally ready to verify. That is the kind of fight we are going to make in this campaign."

The reference apparently was to the nominee's contact with Hamilton several years ago, when Landon managed Clyde M. Reed's successful campaign against Hamilton for the Kansas governorship.

In uttering the challenge for an immediate campaign of action, Landon stepped out of the reticent role he played through most of the pre-convention period.

Surrounded by reporters who in recent weeks had heard him frequently "decline to comment," the governor leaned back in the chair behind his desk and replied: "Sure, I'll invade the enemy territory—if any. This is going to be a real campaign from now on."

Smiling, Landon puffed on a straight-stem pipe, applying a match at intervals. Invited questions and dropped into an easy vernacular. When he liked an idea he said "Well." Altogether at ease, he apparently had thrown off a strain and guardedness displayed at previous conferences.

Will Share Drive

"I want to get the campaign plans under way right away," he announced.

"Will Colonel Knox do most of the rough riding?" asked a newsman referring to the vice-presidential nominee's service with the "Rough Riders" during the Spanish-American War.

"No," announced the governor with emphasis. "I'll do my end of it."

In a message of congratulation to Knox yesterday Landon said "I welcome the renewal of our comradeship in the same great cause for which we fought together under the leadership of Theodore Roosevelt—the cause of the larger Americanism."

"May we be given the strength and wisdom to go forward along the trail he so bravely blazed." The vice-presidential nominee replied from Chicago he would be "dedicated to come to Topeka next Monday."

"We are at arm's length again and I prize highly the opportunity under your leadership to fight the battle to a victorious conclusion in a far graver crisis than that of 1912."

Among the things to be decided by the convention today, Landon said, probably will be selection of a site for his formal nomination, whether here in Topeka or at his home town, Independence, Kas.

Speculation Over Democrats

Cleveland, June 12 (AP)—A major question on the agenda today was whether the Democratic party would battle on the field outlined by the Republicans in its bid at the Philadelphia convention to make a new field of

The enthusiasm of delegates to the Republican convention just closed and the statements of party leaders laid much emphasis upon certain plans and principles as to make almost certain that Democratic platform would focus attention upon them for appropriate treatment at the next year's convention.

Landon spoke up in his telegram to the convention for a "nominee elected in terms of gold and copper with the assurance that restoration of such a currency should not be made without securing our domestic economy and without injury to our producers of agricultural products and other materials."

In view of the New Deal's action in abolishing "gold certificate" would the Democratic platform now

Senator Borah Keeps Own Counsel, Says Interest Is in Issues

Washington, June 13 (AP)—Senator Borah, once a Shakespearean actor, for many years a puzzling figure in politics, again plays mystery man.

Defeated at Cleveland for the Republican presidential nomination, he refuses today to say whether he will support Alf M. Landon of Kansas, the victor.

Skeptical of Landon's monetary views, Borah nevertheless remains silent on his plans for the current battle.

He agrees that the Landon managers gave him a "square deal" in negotiations on the platform but declines to say where his vote will go.

"I said many times prior to the convention that I was primarily interested in issues, and that is my present attitude and that will be my attitude from now on," he says.

Senator Norris, Nebraska Republican who supported President Roosevelt in 1932 and since then, commenting in the Republican national convention said "The Old Guard is still in the saddle." He indicated his continued support of Mr. Roosevelt instead of turning to the Republican nominee.

For more than thirty years, he said, he had fought the special interests and had looked forward to a President who would dedicate himself to breaking the strangle hold of these interests upon the lives of the American people. He believed President Roosevelt was such a man.

"I have never been more convinced of the truth of the conviction that the issue is clearly drawn between the forces of reaction and those of liberal progress than during the three long days that I have followed the proceeding at Cleveland," said the veteran Nebraska senator in a formal statement.

"In the Republican party as now organized and led, the old guard is still in the saddle and in my opinion the welfare of the nation and our people demands that the new order be continued. I am confident it will be."

The spontaneous demonstration given former President Hoover at Cleveland, Norris said, "is conclusive evidence that the party leaders still believe in reactionary principles and have learned nothing from experience."

Wage Increase Favored

Albany, N. Y., June 13 (AP)—Resolutions urging a 25 percent wage increase and a 50 hour week were adopted in the Federated Shopcrafts of the New York Central System and allied lines at the closing of their convention here. President Asa C. Bisco of Cleveland, and all other officers were re-elected.

Sale Negotiations

Athens, June 12 (AP)—The arrival today of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, Germany's minister of economics and president of the Reichsbank, for what was officially described as a return visit to the government of the bank of Greece was accompanied by an unconfirmed report that he is negotiating a sale of armaments.

State G. O. P. Seeking Harmony in Drive To Win Big Election

Albany, N. Y., June 13 (AP)—Republican leaders in New York launched plans today for a state convention as harmonious and united as the national coplaya "and win President Roosevelt's home state in November."

Returning home after the four-day national meeting at Cleveland, leaders scheduled a June 23 conference of county chairmen at Syracuse "for a preliminary discussion" and freely predicted a return of the party to power in New York and in the nation.

Friends of Mayor Roland B. Marvin, of Syracuse, said that in the interest of party harmony, he had decided to withdraw from the gubernatorial field and throw his support to State Senator George R. Fearon, also of Syracuse. Returning from the Cleveland convention Mayor Marvin daily denied making such a decision and charged attempts had been made to "call him off" while he was in Cleveland.

Fearon at Convention

Fearon also was at the national convention, as were several others prominently mentioned for the candidacy. Among them were Supreme Court Justice William F. Blakely, Yonkers, Col. Theodore Roosevelt, fifth cousin of the President, and Senator Joe R. Hanley, of Perry.

J. Russell Sprague, Nassau county leader and chairman of the convention delegation, and Clarence E. King of Syracuse, Onondaga county chairman, scoffed at reports they would immediately to acquire the state chairmanship which Melvin C. Eaton, present leader, says he will relinquish.

Reported rifts within the party that might hasten Eaton's resignation were firmly denied by leaders. Eaton, himself, said, "There's nothing to them."

New York appeared likely to be a pivotal state in the campaign to elect Governor Landon and Frank Knox, presidential and vice-presidential nominees, respectively.

Leaders considered the advisability of coordinating efforts of the state and national committees and the national congress only counts a fee, with a single headquarters in New York City.

Hails Candidates

Chairman Eaton hailed Landon and Knox as representing the type of Americans and statesmen who will govern in the best interests of the people, and not in the interest of self perpetuation or political aggrandizement.

"Governor Landon and Colonel Knox are thoroughly sound, completely honest and sincere, and well suited in the moral and economic problems which confront the people of the country today," he said.

Messages from back home state complete satisfaction with the action of the convention and delegates will assure that the voters of New York state, irrespective of party affiliation, will vote to place the state in the Republican column and elect a Republican governor, a Republican senator and to secure continued Republican control of the Assembly."

FLASHES OF LIFE SKETCHED IN BRIEF

By Associated Press

(By The Associated Press.)

Oyster Catches Fish.

St. Augustine, Fla.—A catfish made the mistake of its life when it swam lazily past an oyster anchored on the sea wall here.

The fish slipped its tail into the oyster's open shell. The shellfish clamped shut. The fish was caught. Spectators pried the oyster off the wall later but the fish was dead.

"Fire Tickers."

Suffolk, Va.—Interesting, no doubt, but expensive as well, says Police Chief "Monk" Churn, of this sport of following fire apparatus. Peevish because automobiles of spectators blocked the ladder truck following the pumping engine to a fire, the chief has announced that "tickers" for vantage points closer than a block away are going to be plenty nigh.

Splitting the Difference.

Tulsa, Okla.—"Come back in 20 minutes and give this man 20 years," demanded Assistant County Attorney M. L. Simms in a car theft case. The jury returned in 10 minutes, with a 10-year verdict.

Strong Arm of Law.

Oklahoma City—Deputy Sheriff W. E. Agee, about to mount a horse, jerked the saddle horn to make sure the saddle was fastened securely. Next time, he'll be still more careful. The horse fell on him.

Soil-Conserving Payments Listed

Ithaca, N. Y., June 13.—The average rate of Class I, or soil-conserving, payment in Ulster county, under the terms of the 1936 agricultural conservation program will be $12.30 an acre, according to an announcement from Washington.

The rate for each individual farm in the county will depend on the way the productivity of the farm compares with the average productivity of all the farms in the county.

Class I payments will be made this year to farmers who divert some of their acreage of soil-depleting crops to soil-conserving crops. The announcement says that farmers who elect to do this will receive the Class I rate for their farms for each acre diverted, up to fifteen per cent of their soil-depleting base acreage.

For the entire country, the average county rate of the Class I payment is ten dollars an acre.

The Class I rate applies to all soil-depleting crops except tobacco, which is grown in only a limited area in New York state and for which the rate has already been announced. The county rate for diverting other soil-depleting crops is based on the productivity of all farms in the county, taking into account average yields of the principal soil-depleting crops over a period of years.

Rates of the Class II payments, for using approved soil-building practices, have already been announced. It is pointed out that a farmer may qualify for either or both types of payment provided he conforms to the standards of the program and fills out a work sheet. County agricultural conservation agents and committeemen are now helping farmers to fill out work sheets and receive them when completed.

Snowing on Everest

Barjeeling, India, June 13 (AP)—A heavy snowstorm enveloped Mount Everest today leading to the belief Hugh Rutledge's British mountain-climbing expedition would have to abandon its attempt to scale the 29,000-foot peak.

KINGSTON, N. Y., JUNE 13, 1936

"FLAG OF THE FREE"

Flag Day, June 14, is not a holiday, so the occasion is not particularly exciting and is celebrated chiefly by the growing custom of hanging out flags. The Daughters of the American Revolution and other patriotic groups have special Flag Day programs, but there is nothing official or compulsory about any of it.

What is the flag? It is an emblem. It marks the land or building or ship over which it flies an American. The flag itself is made of bits of cloth sewed together in a particular design, chosen by the Continental Congress on June 14.

The respect we pay the flag is paid not to the red, white and blue banner, but to the things for which it stands—the government of which every citizen, however humble, is supposed to be a part; freedom and loyalty to all our American traditions; education and opportunity for our youth. We pay little honor to our flag when we salute it if we are not, in our daily thinking and living, supporting these ideals and practices.

TECHNOCRACY STILL ALIVE

"Technocracy," which made considerable noise four or five years ago and has been inconspicuous lately, is still living and vocal. Its chief spokesman, Howard Scott, is not discouraged by the seeming lack of popular interest. He coolly tells an audience that his mission is "not to persuade the masses, but to educate and interest only the intelligent, and to insult and shame the general public into agreement or consent." He frankly distrusts and opposes democracy. "We cannot succeed so long as the present democratic political system of government is in control,"
 he explains, "or so long as Americans are afflicted with the peculiar diseases of American liberalism."

Oh, very well! Intelligent Americans—and perhaps more of us are intelligent than the Technocrats realize—appreciate the defects of democracy, but with all its faults we love it still. Ineffective as our liberalism is, in spots, we still prefer it to autocracy. And much as we distrust the politicians bred by a system of free popular government, we would still rather be governed by them than by slide-rules and thinking-machines. The engineers that Technocracy would put in charge of government understand mathematics and machinery, but not men. They don't understand that government is primarily a human problem, to be solved not by mathematical formulas
 but by human beings serving human beings.

LUCKY DOGS

There is natural human interest in the good fortune of two New York
 dogs named "Lucky" and "Fluffy," canine members of the family of the late Rhonda F. Greene, whose will has just been filed for probate. They are to have for the next 12 years, which will safely cover the term of their lives, the income from a $4,000
 trust fund established for them.
 The Rhonda-We Home Association
 will handle the trust.

We hope "Lucky" and "Fluffy"
 will appreciate their good fortune
 and the duty that they have—although they might be as well cared for and possibly happier, in the hands of some of the testator's relatives rather than an institution.
 Anyway they have economic security. They are sure of an income, for the rest of their lives, as large as any dog could expect to have.

New York working women since the state minimum wage law was declared unconstitutional.

PATIENCE OF THE JORLES

A somewhat colorful article about the life of John Jorles and women says it through him more than through anything else he has written lately.
 The letters were mostly short, were
 by expressing appreciation, and a

could surprise that anyone seemed to take a real interest in them. It was touching to the writer, and made him wonder all the more at
 "one of the marvels of these disturbed times—that the jobless millions have remained so patient. He says.

As a matter of ordinary humanity,
 the situation of the unemployed
 should be the first concern of our government and of every citizen.
 But people who are jobless over a long period feel so beaten, hopeless
 and neglected that they are grateful for the smallest acknowledgment of the difficulties of their situation as individuals. You can catch the pulse beats of a jobless world in some of these letters, or of a world that remembers what it is to be out of a job.

Every newspaper editor knows the truth of this statement. People have been patient in this country, sometimes perhaps a little too patient for their own good. Especially when they have been scorned by more fortunate citizens for public aid that they only accepted after brave and bitter struggle to maintain their independence. The patience and charity that such people have shown toward the rest of society should not be abused.

HAVE MORE THAN ONE CAUSE

It was only after many years
 search that it was discovered that it was the bite of the mosquito that transferred malaria from one individual to another.

Similarly after many years of search it was found that it was that the organisms causing the plague
 were transferred to man by rats.

Drs. Minot and Murphy, Boston, discovered that if liver were fed in one good serving daily to patients with pernicious anemia (then an incurable ailment), the patient's life
 could be prolonged for many years instead of death occurring in two or three years.

Drs. Banting and Best, Toronto,
 Canada, discovered that if enough
 of the juice manufactured in a certain part of the pancreas gland of animals (insulin) were injected into a patient suffering with diabetes at that time an incurable ailment) the patient's life could be prolonged so that as long as the insulin were injected the uncomplicated case of diabetes would continue to live.

Thus as in the above ailments and in small pox, diphtheria, scarlet fever and many other ailments there has been found one single cause for the symptoms so also have research workers been seeking a single cause
 for other ailments such as cancer, asthma, rheumatism, the common cold.

However it is now being realized
 that a number of factors may enter into the cause of any of the above
 and other ailments and so the findings of research workers, widely separated by distance and in their ideas of what may cause a certain ailment are nevertheless giving their findings to research workers everywhere instead of waiting until they obtain the "final" results which may be still many years off.

Thus all cases of rheumatism are not thought to be due to infection from teeth, tonsils, gall bladder and intestine. Neither is it believed that too much starch will cause or aggravate rheumatism in all cases. It is known that infection, starch food, cold damp climate, injury to a joint and other factors enter into the cause of the symptoms of rheumatism or arthritis and treatment is given in accordance with this knowledge.

Similarly with asthma: the factors
 entering into its cause may be pollen
 from plants, tiny organisms from domestic animals, an alkaline condition of the body, a defect or deformity of the nose and throat, lack of deep breathing and other conditions
 all of which knowledge is given to the public by the British Asthma Research Council, and other organizations.

KINGSTON: Hope Enderton, a little Swiss village in watching Square Friday. Burdett looking down the main street. He is a miser, he counts tears in the direction of the women. As he looks by Peter Steele, vector of St. Leonard and a life in short the unpleasant end of a long time of acquiescence, he has had illustrious and pleasant men in it. It is the morning of the 13th of January.

Chapter Two

HASTY RETREAT

IT had been the Rector's intention on leaving the Fentons' shop, to go straight back to the Rectory
 where work awaited him, but this would have meant crossing the square so directly in front of Burdett as to make some sort of greeting inevitable; and sooner than endure that, the Rector turned sharply on his heel and set out on a troublesome detour as though he had suddenly remembered somebody at the top end of the village whom he wished to see.

Arthur Burdett knew exactly what was going on in the priest's mind, just as though he had been able to see inside it. Indeed some people in the village said that he was able to see a good deal farther into other folk's minds than was right or proper, and they would go

He felt a bitter resentment against all mankind.

no nearer Enderton Court, especially after dark than was necessary, on that account.

Burdett was amused by the priest's antics. Unconsciously his hand closed over his trouser pocket. Money, there was your god. Evident, palpable, powerful. You might argue learnedly about Omnipotence elsewhere, but here you had it. If you had money what was there you couldn't do? You could command—
 not long for, but command—privacy,
 position, security.

Men would do anything for money,
 and women too; Arthur Burdett knew that. It had long been his principle and almost his only tenet of faith, and it came back to him now with renewed force and vigor. Men would do anything for money—even steal for it. A cold sweat broke out on his forehead as he thought, never very far from the surface of his consciousness, and he hastened a pace which was already remarkably active for a man in his seventy-third year.

NOW all his equanimity was gone.
 He was not amused now by the thought of Mrs. Jennings' daughter, the Rector, or anything else. He was in a fever now to get home,
 and he would have broken into a run only he was afraid of his heart,
 his cursed, traitor heart which would not let him hurry back fast enough to his money.

If he ran he would unquestionably overstrain an already uncertain heart and kill himself; if he didn't run he was convinced that some imminent and dire misfortune would overtake the only thing he valued in life.

Life without money, or money
 without life seemed the only alternatives. Arthur Burdett seriously wondered as he hurried along in such and such a study for the gods
 whether any human being had ever been in so grievous a dilemma before. At that moment there was nothing in the world that he cared about save getting back to Enderton
 Court to see if all was secure.

And yet, on the instant, as he hurried along he shot one of his characteristic quick, suspicious glances sideways, he saw something which separable companion wherever he went. He had gypsy blood in him, he could provide anything from a bundle of firewood to a dagger, but most of all he liked dealing in horses.

And he enjoyed haggling about
 the money almost as much as actually disposing of his wares. At the moment he was trying to sell Dale a mare which he had "come by"
 (the diplomatically vague phrase was his own) a week or two before.
 The mare was an attractive animal,
 she looked to have more than a dash of blood about her, and Dawley
 had vowed by every strange combination of oath known to man that if she wasn't actually the perfect hunter she was as near it as made no matter. She stood now in a stall at the top of the Horseshoe Yard
 and the two men had just completed a prolonged inspection of her.

"Can she jump?" Dale asked suddenly.

"Jump?" Dawley ran his eye round the yard as though to find some suitable object to lend support to the tone of his voice. His glance rested for a moment with the six-foot wall that bounded the yard and then seemed to reject it as unworthy.

"Jump," he repeated. "Mr. Dale that mare'll jump like nothing you ever seen. She's a natural jumper, born to it, there isn't anything in this part of the country she couldn't jump hobbled."

"Not thinking of entering her for the National are you?" Dale enquired.

"She wouldn't disgrace me if I did,
 that I will swear."

"I'll take her for a week on trial."

The gypsy spat. "I can't do business like that Mr. Dale and a gentleman like you knows it. What money have I got?"

"A damned sight more than me."

"Ah, gentlemen always talk like that. No, I can't do trial business.
 Mr. Dale, it's take it or leave it with me, and a good bargain at that."

"Fifty then."

"Sixty-five and cheap."

 something else happens.

Use Of Leisure

By BROOKE PETERS CHURCH

It looks as if the great question
 for the future will be how to use leisure. The past and present generations have been too busy gaining a livelihood to pay much attention to constructive use of spare time.

There was so little time left over after the day's work was done, that there was no problem. Even children had their chores to do after school and home work were over,
 and summer vacations were pretty sure to find them running errands,
 mowing lawns, or delivering groceries.

But we seem to be facing a future
 when more than half of men's waking hours will be free. Shall they be spent tearing about the country
 in speeding cars, going nowhere, wasting time and energy on nothing? Or lying on bathing beaches, sitting in night clubs, hanging about
 street corners?

Man's realization of conditions
 still lags behind the actual facts.
 Educators and parents still discuss the need of less pure culture, more application of education to earning a living, when what we need is more culture, more application of education on how to live.

Every child should be trained, not only to earn a living, but how to use his spare time. Furthermore,
 his avocation should be stressed quite as much as his vocation. He may take up stamp-collecting, weaving, carpentry, philosophy, history
 or playing the saxophone as his leisure time job. He should be encouraged to choose as his avocation the thing he most loves, and to do it as thoroughly and well as he does his job.

One's means of livelihood may be unattractive. One cannot always choose one's job. But so long as one has a hobby which one loves and spare time in which to ride it, life
 can still be full and rich.

TEXAS ART REALISM

Austin, Tex., (AP).—Texas wants realism in its art. The model for the bronze statue of Sam Houston, to be placed in the group of Texas heroes
 in the state building of the Centennial at Dallas, showed Houston in the full dress of his days. It was ordered to be redone, giving Houston
 a more conservative garb.

ROAD PIERCES CEMETERY TO HELP OUT CONVENTION

Philadelphia, (AP)—A highway through a cemetery is being built to alleviate traffic congestion attending the Democratic national convention which opens here June 27.

The roadways traverse Woodland Cemetery, beginning at Baltimore avenue and cutting onto Vantage street a few hundred feet from the municipal auditorium, scene of the convention.

In addition, thousands of dollars are being spent to improve all streets in the vicinity of and leading to the hall. Automobile traffic is expected to be the heaviest in the city, and the proposed elevated-subway tracks are being moved.

Efforts are being made to provide extraordinary cases on the part of a woman who was not dressed enough. What would happen if that were tried here?

If you see a neighbor walk dejectedly into the garage, he is probably going after the lawn mower to start to work. If he goes in jauntily it is probably to get his fishing tackle to go fishing.

When a tire reaches the doubtful stage; when you start wondering just how much longer it will run, take it off. Don't take chances with your life by using old, worn out tires. Better walk.

The ordinary citizen can feel something like the soldier in the trenches; the hero who for summer motoring is here and the casualty rolls will soon start to come in.

Wives are getting harder and harder to handle. They can't back the car out of the garage and it's come to the point where they won't push the lawnmower out of the garage.

At the risk of monotonous repetition we assert that highway safety will never be what it ought to be until pedestrians take their share of responsibility and exercise their share of caution.

Epitaph:
Bill thought his gas was getting low; He struck a match—the tank let go; Bill sailed 3 miles right in the air. Three miles on a pint is pretty fair.

The burly truck driver leaned out of his cab and roundly abused the young man in the stalled car. The girl stood it as long as she could. Girl (protesting)—Jack, surely you're going to say something to that surly lout!

Jack—You bet I am. Just wait till I get the car started.

A Nature Study
The centipede ne'er rides a steed; he is only a equestrian. His only claim to deathless fame is as a centipede.

An American woman of note, advocating bright clothing for children as a means of avoiding motor accidents, revised the old saying to make it read: "Children should be seen and not hurt."

The easiest thing in the world used to be falling off a log; now it's buying an automobile on credit.

A man entered the waiting room of a hospital. His head was enveloped in bandages. Doctor—Are you married? Man—No. I've been run over.

If you hope for pleasant things to turn up, be sure to keep the corners of your mouth that way.

Waiter—Haven't you forgotten something, sir? Professor—Why, I thought I gave you the customary tip.

Waiter—You did, sir, but you forgot to eat.

A government bureau is a piece of machinery made up of drawers... of salaries.

A certain woman was driving a nail in the wall the other day and suddenly uttered a scream of anguish: Husband (teasing)—Missed the nail, did you?

Wife (howling)—Missed it! Don't talk foolish. I hit the nail—my thumb nail.

The Little Country Town
There are people in the cities who look on us as quaint. They think the folks in the small towns are missing some great chance.

They have theatres and night clubs to pass the hours away. But they don't know how a kindly deed can brighten up a day.

And when trouble comes, or sorrow, when a loved one is no more, it's the friendly, small-town folks who beat a pathway to your door.

So we'll let the city dwellers pursue their restless way. For we'd rather have a neighbor than a night club, any day.

Those two certainties, death and taxes, are not equally annoying. You can only die once.

900 Children Off For Summer Homes

More than 900 children, the first of an all-summer "regira" from city streets, will be moved from the congested areas of Manhattan to eight fresh air homes in New York and New Jersey between July 3 and 5, under plans announced last night at the fourth annual Summer Home Institute which opened a three-day course at the home of the Franciscan Missionaries of Mary at Roslyn, L. I.

The youngsters will be guests for two-week periods of the several religious communities in the New York Archdiocese who maintain fresh air homes, which last year in the course of the summer accommodated 4,000 children at an expenditure of approximately $50,000. Succeeding flights will follow at two-week intervals until September.

College Women Tell Of Their Hobbies

The Kingston College Women's Club closed its year of activity on Tuesday of this week with a buffet supper at Watson Hollow Inn which was attended by some 50 members. Following the supper there was a roll call of those present, each member responding by telling of her hobby. Some of the members had even gone so far as to work up clever little stories in connection with their hobbies, which proved highly entertaining to the audience.

Miss Mary Staphis, Miss Mary Hubbard and Miss Eleanor LePage presented an amusing and clever play, entitled "Conversations in the Garden." The play was a costume of the early 1900's and a scene that might have taken place on Ladies' Day at the golf club. The play was a dialogue between a young man and a young woman, who were both members of the club, while Mrs. LePage, attired in costume, bearing a duster in one hand and a telephone in the other, which she alternately taxed her energies to the utmost explained that between the two she had no time for hobbies.

Mrs. Herbert Bloom, explaining that she had always found the study of old life a fascinating pastime, told of her observation in this field. Through the roll call, the club learned of the wide variety of interests that its members have.

A short business meeting at which the group discussed the various means of raising money for the scholarship fund. The officers for the coming year are: President, Mrs. William H. Gay Colors, Cut-Outs And Ruffles Decorate Newest Window Shades

Floral patterns may be cut from chintz and cemented on shades.

By MARGERY TAYLOR

(Copyright, 1936, by McCall's Magazine for The Freeman)

Window shades are no longer something to hide behind draperies. Shades have become room decorations, and many are decorated themselves. Very interesting they are, too.

The new style is a single pair of curtains or draperies, revealing the shade. Shade decorations run from cut-outs and decalcomania patterns to a scalloped flounce or ruffle of drapery material stitched to the bottom of the shade.

But, believe it or not, the color of shade you prefer depends on where you live. Baltimore, for instance, favors white shades in winter and dark blue in summer. Where Virginia likes green, ocre or white, the mid-west prefers deep creamy yellow and the far west "warm" colors or gray. New England votes for apple green, but Providence is original in its taste for brick red. Shade decorations should, of course, express the room they decorate. For the man's room, cut-outs illustrating his hobby are appropriate—golf balls and clubs, or silhouetted mechanical gadgets. For the boy's room there are cut-outs for everything a boy likes in the way of nautical subjects or sports. The nursery will like balloons, animals, flowers and soldiers. In the game room there are card or chess designs. Floral patterns cut from chintz and carefully cemented in the middle of the shade are just right for the girl's room—with long length organdy curtains looped back and a bent wire cornice. The top. Paper shades— inexpensive and good looking—are becoming popular. One line comes ready decorated—dainty chintz motifs, plaids and one like Venetian blinds. Sheer curtains or side draperies are all they need.

Gasoline Not Meant for Dry Cleaner and State Fire Chiefs Said Why

"Gasoline is a fuel, and a fuel only... Scared? Say, I've gone into some of those gasoline plants with a fire roaring and my hair has stood on end... Dynamite? Dynamite is a child's plaything compared with gasoline. Gasoline is 16 times as explosive as the most volatile dynamite... Why women and dry cleaning plants won't realize that the use of gasoline and other volatiles is the most dangerous thing they can do, is beyond me... No fire is needed, open flame or otherwise, to set off gasoline. A spark of static electricity will do the trick."

Thus ran the warnings of the state fire chiefs assembled in Kingston last week. In every address pertaining to fire fighting each speaker either dressed enough to cover the above points or made them in speaking to a Freeman reporter. And the plea they wished made, the one they considered most important to the housewives both as a medium of fire prevention and safety first was: "Don't use gasoline as a dry cleaner."

Chief Charles Huber, of Endicott, told the Freeman reporter that a woman in Akron, Ohio, had cleaned a pair of elbow-length kid gloves with gasoline, hung them outdoors to dry, but before they had dried entirely took them back into the house. She slipped one glove on and was smoothing the wrinkles along her arm when a spark of static electricity, generated by the stroke of her hand over the saturated glove, ignited the fumes. They buried the woman two days later, Chief Huber said.

Chief Gieselman, of Syracuse, said he is appalled daily by the careless use of gasoline in the homes. Many an otherwise intelligent woman is an utter fool, when dry cleaning things in the home.

So it goes, and the editor of this page wishes to repeat the warnings of the fire chiefs to the housewives who will read these lines.

"Keep your gasoline in your car's gas tank."

FAUCET AND SPRAY TO CLEANSE DISHES

A combination kitchen faucet that has both a swing spout and an attachment for a spray is very useful. The most sanitary way of washing the dishes is to cleanse them with soap and water, place them in a wire rack, spray them with scalding water and set the rack on the drain-board to dry.

Bath Tub Seat Handy.

A new bath tub has a roomy seat, measuring 11½ inches from front to back, at one end. The seat is 30 inches wide, which is the same as the width of the tub. It is two inches lower than the rim of the bath and is pitched to provide proper drainage. The seat is a convenience for foot bathing or for bathing children.

Do a good job of staking now before plants that need it get out of hand. Branched twigs for weak stalked annuals are very practical.

Wardrobe Worries Of Daylight Savers Bring New Fashions For Early Dinners

By ADELAIDE KERR

New York (AP)—Daylight Savers Fashions have been launched here to settle the question of "what to wear" when dining before dark. The sheerest of fabrics, high necklines and street length skirts are the "triple decree" for chic.

The extra daylight hour—long the bane of farmers and railway clerks—presents a new wardrobe worry to smart metropolitans, who object to donning dinner and evening clothes before the lights begin to gleam, but dislike to finish the evening at the theatre or in a bright dance spot in afternoon attire. To meet the situation one designer created a range of daylight dining frocks.

They nearly all are made of the sheerest black or navy blue silk mousseline (which closely resembles silk organdy), designed with high necklines and skirts which are just a shade longer than street length. The sleeves in some are long, in others short and puffed.

Variety Provided

One is fashioned with brief puffed sleeves and a knee-length tunic rimmed in black satin braid, another with a peplum bodice marked with yellow silk tailored bows at neckline and hem.

The gem of the collection has been dubbed "Commuter's Delight" because it may be worn into town on the train, go shopping all day and step out to daylight dining in the evening. It is a sheer black organdy two piece model whose tailored top is banded in white pique and accented by a white belt and buttons. It may be worn with either black or white accessories.

Long skirted dinner suits are another favorite for daylight dining. The summer edition comes in a wide variety of designs. Suits of black satin-back crepe with jackets as tailored as a man's dinner coat are worn with colorful chiffon shirtwaists or frivolous white chiffon blouses accented with edgings of Valenciennes lace.

Skirt and Jacket

Other models combine a long black skirt with a tailored jacket of white, black or navy blue or a short sleeved bolero white blouse and bright cummerbund (swatched grille).

Two tone prints—navy and white for instance—make smart suits of daytime length combining a sleeveless little frock having a cut out back with a brief jacket which makes it suitable for street wear.

Hats, bags, gloves and handkerchiefs do much to stamp the daylight

Here is a daylight dining frock designed to be worn before dark, and dubbed "Commuter's Delight" because it is suitable for afternoon shopping as well as for dinner and the theatre. It is a two piece design of sheer black silk mousseline edged in crisp white pique and finished with a white suede belt. A wide brimmed white hat, bag and gloves complete the costume.

dining suits with chic. One smart New Yorker wears her black crepe suit with a cordflower blue chiffon blouse and a flower boutonniere and toque of the same cornflower blue.

Another combines a black silk or New York daylight dinner frock trimmed in yellow bows with a wide brimmed black straw hat, black suede gloves and bag.

Flowers for Graduation

An Armful of Fragrance and Beauty Is the Preferred Bouquet

Girl graduates this June may wear shoulder bouquets to match their dresses, but probably will prefer to carry large bouquets, whole armfuls of fragrance and beauty.

A happy graduation requires that every detail of dress and accessories shall be just right, for this is an occasion to be remembered long after school days are over. It may be of tragic importance if something is lacking, that would affect the appearance of the graduate.

The illustration shows a loose arm bouquet of pink roses carried by a graduate dressed in pastel blue; one of the loveliest color combinations possible, in perfect harmony with the delicate beauty of maidenhood.

June is so rich in floral beauty, that a wide choice can be made in planning a graduate's bouquet. To win her lasting gratitude, consult her taste, or have the florist do so. She has probably given much thought to the exact part which flowers are to play in the effect of her costume.

A combination of long spikes of delphinium or larkspur with shorter flowers such as daisies, roses or sweet peas, would be particularly lovely. Indeed, it is possible in this month to provide a bouquet of any color or type which Miss Graduate might fancy.

One advantage of an arm bouquet of long stemmed flowers is that they may be taken home and placed in water to be further enjoyed for several days. Cut the ends of the stems so they will more readily take up water and place them in a cool place away from drafts.

When a friend returns home after being away for some time, possibly after being confined to a hospital, a bouquet of cheery flowers or a potted plant will breathe the message "Welcome home." Even if the house or apartment has been closed for a long while the fresh flowers will immediately make it alive and homelike, and your friend will appreciate your thoughtfulness expressed in such a novel way.

Buy the plant in season. It will be more economical and last longer.

There's a new and glamorous style note in the evening picture, for stunningly fashioned gowns of light weight summer satin, printed in colorful floral designs, are being shown by smart style houses to enhance the varied night-time mode.

The shimmering flower printed fabrics present "something different" for summer evening parties.

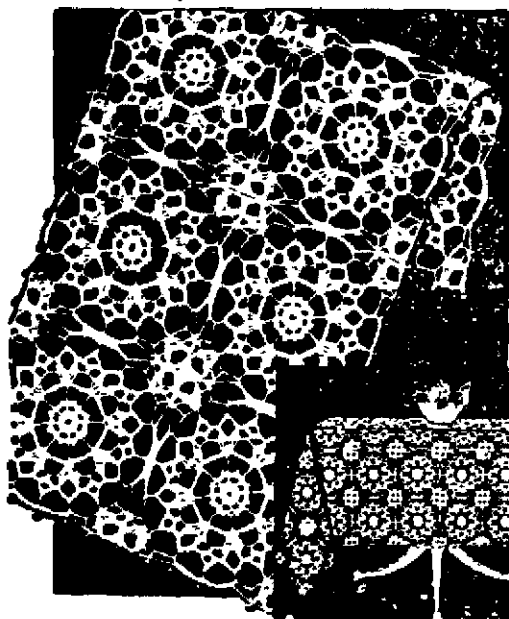

The gown sketched above is accompanied by a brief, fitted jacket designed with short, puffed sleeves—an addition that increases the costume's scope of usefulness by making it adaptable to informal dinner wear.

In this model, large red and fuchsia colored flowers in group arrangement are printed on a white background. The front neckline is V-shaped with self-straps over the shoulders extending to a quite low back decollete.

An important note also, is the placing of skirt fulness at back as the posing of a huge bunch of trimming flowers at the front decollete

OLD FURNITURE MADE NEW

A grand "hold-all" sideboard and a smart new bookshelf table—made from cast-offs with a whiff of the past!

To make the sideboard, or "Welsh dresser," dig up that old kitchen cabinet, remove upper doors, stick wallpaper in "garden vegetable" pattern back of shelves and on lower doors. For sticking on the paper use rubber cement. Add in a 2-foot cube. Paint or enamel the rest a soft Delft blue. Curtains of transparent yellow Argentine cloth (or organdy) protect the dishes from dust. Smart in the kitchen or on that screened porch where summer luncheon are served.

The bookshelf-table shown in second sketch is made from an old, scoured dining-room buffet. Varnish, remove a dull putty-knife, and wire wool took off all the old varnish, revealing the good oak beneath. Good wood is worth treating to a natural

Directoire Dining Room

This small but formal dining room was decorated with funds obtained under the Reconstruction Credit Plan of the Federal Housing Administration. The walls above the white wainscoting are light blue, with a matching ceiling. The floor is of a composition material, resembling marble. A blue tile window seat forms a miniature conservatory. Furnishings are black, white, and gold, and window draperies are of two shades of blue.

Ithaca, N. Y., June 13.—New York farmers are showing considerable interest in the new agricultural conservation program, according to C. H. Bradt, principal field officer, who says nearly 29,000 have already filed "work sheets" as the first step in the program.

The work sheets have been filed by farmers in every agricultural county in the state, with St. Lawrence county leading the state in numbers.

Farmers who have not done this still have time, Mr. Bradt says. Filling out a work sheet incurs no obligation. It merely places a farmer in a position to receive payments for which he may qualify later. Payments are made to improve pasture and hay land; to grow such game crops as alfalfa and clover; to grow under ground manure crops; plant cover crops in orchards; mulch orchards; to plant forest trees and to set out windbreaks on weak and sandy soils.

Mr. Bradt emphasizes that "no farmer has to reduce his crop acreage to take part and to be eligible for payments. Some payments are made when land devoted to soil-depleting crops as corn, potatoes, beans, and vegetables in 1935 is planted to soil-conserving crops as clover, alfalfa, and green manure crops in 1936. Payments for diversifying such crops average $11.50 an acre for five years.

"Even without diversifying crops, the farmer still has a chance to receive payments for following sound soil-building practices on his farm. It is believed that the greatest share of payments that will come to New York farmers will be for diversifying

Colonials Wallop Cuban Giants By 11-5, to Take 3 Game Series

Slamming Hall and White all over the field, the Kingston Colonials staged a nine run barrage in the first two innings to cop a one-sided game with the Cuban Giants by 11-5 last night at Pan-Am field. The game was the deciding one of a series of three.

Hall started on the mound for the Colonials and was nipped for seven hits which were all turned into runs. Hall went to the showers as White came on the field for the relief roll. Two more runs were immediately scored when Tiano singled and went across the platter as Knight smacked a homer. White was sent to the bench and Gordon took his place. Hoffman and Niles singled in the last of the eighth and two more runs resulted for the Colonials when Burgevin hit a triple to deep center.

Deery Van Buren tossed them over for the Kingston Club and did not weaken until the eighth when the Colonials scored three runs. They gained two more in the ninth but they finished the game in good shape.

Niles, with three hits in five trips, was the big gun on the attack for the Colonials. Knight followed him closely with a homer and double. Roberts' double and triple led the Colonials.

Terry Ousted from No. 1 Batting Post

New York, June 13 (AP)—Manager Bill Terry of the New York Giants, aging and ailing, abdicated the pacesetter position in the big league batting parade during the past week, and a couple of youngsters moved into the one-two spots.

Rookie Stu Martin, the St. Louis Cardinals' clouter, boosted himself into the National League leadership over the Giants' pilot. He wound up the week with an average of .391.

Princeton Track Meet Will Draw 45,000 Fans

Princeton, N. J., June 13 (AP)—A brief but potent tradition of excitement and record smashing is expected to bring upwards of 45,000 fans to Palmer Stadium today to see a track meet which already has shattered one tradition.

The third Princeton invitation meet, comprising seven events with an entry list limited to a few of the nation's outstanding stars in each, doesn't cost the spectators anything this year. It is probably the only modern major athletic event, barring crew races, which has ever been conducted without an admission fee.

The seven events are the high jump, 400 meters hurdles, two-mile run, 440-yards run, 120 yards high hurdles, half mile run and mile run. They'll be staged in that order, the first starting at 4 p. m. (E. S. T.).

For the past two years, the mile has been the great event. In 1934 Glenn Cunningham of Kansas made track history as he established the world record of 4:06.7. Last year Jack Lovelock of New Zealand, who had set the record Cunningham broke, led the way to the tape with Bill Bontrouth beating out Cunningham for second place.

This year Bontrouth, making a comeback, meets Cunningham and Gene Senke of Pennsylvania in the mile which may pave the way to an Olympic team berth.

Eight Olympic Events Conceded to America

By GATLE TALBOT

Berlin (AP)—Even if America manages to send a complete, full-course team to this summer's Olympic Games at Berlin, it is doubtful that the star-spangled brigade will be able to repeat its almost overwhelming triumph of the last Olympics at Los Angeles.

Naturally, the Americans will be expected to win. They always do, and their superiority in a sufficient number of track and field events to outscore any other nation is acknowledged freely on this side. But a survey of European possibilities by The Associated Press indicates the gap is being narrowed steadily.

European nations, particularly Germany, Poland, Austria and Turkey, are becoming more seriously sport-minded every year; the same is true of Japan in the Far East. They are hiring American instructors and really working at it. Some of the results are bound to be in evidence at Berlin.

America, for the time being, is considered unbeatable in certain events—the 100-, 200- and 400-meter dashes, both hurdles, the pole-vault, high jump, polo—but outside of these nothing is conceded. In all races from the 800-meter to the marathon, the American squad can look for plenty of opposition. That's the case, too, in every field event except the pole-vault.

Heavy With Weight Men

Germany and the Scandinavian countries are loaded down with fine weight men and distance runners. Slervot of Germany is the present decathlon record-holder. Janusz Kusociński of Poland proved a distance winner at London and is said to be as good as ever now. Zabalza, the Argentine marathon champion, has been training in Germany for the past year and knocking records right and left.

The only distance event in which America is conceded much chance is the 1,500 meters, but the consensus is that Jack Lovelock, the transplanted New Zealand star, will be able to take care of that, too, if he gets himself in top condition. Jack at present is taking himself seriously as a student at St. Mary's Hospital, London, spending long hours every day on his feet watching operations—and they say that takes speed out of a man's legs.

America's women athletes, as well, are not promised the field day they enjoyed at Los Angeles, where Babe Didrikson practically became an odds-on threat overnight. Germany, since that time, has developed a group of short-haired Amazons who are little short of terrific.

In the last European meet in London they came near sweeping the boards, setting up times and heights and distances comparable to Olympic records. Germany, not so happy about its men, expects its women to make up any deficit.

Those Dutch Gals

Europe's men swimmers don't measure up even close to the Japanese and Americans, but Holland has a pair of girls, Willy den Ouden and Rie Mastenbroek, who will require a lot of beating in the Berlin pool. Willy, who is just 18, set a world record of 1:4.8 for the 100 meters a few months back. She also holds—or did hold—the world mark of 5 minutes, 16 seconds for the 400 meters.

Mastenbroek, only 17, has beaten her recently at the latter distance. Mastenbroek's specialty, however, is the 100-meter backstroke, in which she splashed to a world record of 1:15.8 in February.

In gymnastics, weight-lifting, wrestling, fencing, riding, cycling, field hockey and the modern pentathlon, one or another European nation fully expects to excel, and has figures and records to prove why. None, however, promises to give the American basketballers a very hard run. The yachting, rowing and canoeing events are considered a toss-up all around.

Learning to Swim

By CLARENCE S. SCHOONMAKER

General Secretary, Kingston Y. M. C. A.

The course of six lessons which will follow is based on what is generally conceded to be the best and quickest method of teaching swimming. In practically every place where instructors are keeping abreast with modern methods you will find this method being used. Of course, different instructors will use variations of the method and perhaps different terminology but fundamentally the method is the same.

There are six steps outlined in this course. Each step is of utmost importance. Some of them seem so simple that we are apt to pass over them as unimportant but after years of experience the writer is convinced that mastery of each step as mentioned makes for quicker and more complete success.

"How long will it take me to learn to swim?" is a frequent question. This is almost impossible to answer. Several recent experiences of the writer will illustrate this: One girl about 11 years old learned to swim 20 feet in about one hour and that hour was not entirely spent in work. Two boys about 10 years old learned to swim 20 feet in about 45 minutes. One young man about 25 years old learned to swim about 25 feet in 30 minutes. These cases could be multiplied many times. On the other hand there are a few instances where it takes weeks to get beyond the first two lessons. These cases are rare. It is safe to say that any normal individual who hasn't an excessive fear of the water could easily learn to swim 25 feet in six half-hour periods by following closely the instructions given in the following course. Age makes little difference if there is no great fear. Perhaps fear can be more easily overcome in youngsters than in adults. Even this statement is debatable.

Let's follow the course closely, working in pairs if possible, and see how simple it really is. One lesson will appear each day until the course of six has been completed.

Inter-scholastic Tennis

New York, June 13 (AP)—The eastern inter-scholastic tennis championship, offering the winner and possibly the runner-up a berth in the national championship next September, will be played June 22-27 at Rye, N. Y. Among the more prominent preparatory schools which already have entered teams are the Hill, Kent, Taft, Storm King, Westminster, Pawling, Portsmouth Priory, Guntery, Hotchkiss and Williston Academies. Entries close June 15 in the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association headquarters here.

Allentown, Pa.—Gus Sonnenberg, 205, Boston, threw Ralph Garibaldi, 203, St. Louis, 13-44.

What the country needs most at national conventions, says a delegate, is a place to sit down.

North Bergen, N. J.—Chief Little Wolf, 215, Colorado, threw Hank Barber, 215, Hanover, N. H., 20-22.

Headquarters 7-Universal 4

The Headquarters Battery defeated the Universal towers at the Fair Grounds by the count of 7-4. Preston and Bailey worked for the Battery while Snyder and Van Denberg formed the Universal battery.

President Keresman Submits Resignation

At a meeting of the Kingston Patrolmen's Association, Friday night, President Peter Keresman submitted his resignation to take effect immediately.

His letter of resignation follows: "At each annual election of officers during the past 10 years you have honored me by electing me your president and I am now repeating what I have said many times before, both privately and publicly, my appreciation for this honor."

"During my term of office I have tried to conduct your affairs so as to improve the welfare of its members, all of which is reflected in our efficient organization."

"Without your support and cooperation we would not have reached the high state of efficiency and credit that we now enjoy. During my terms of office our organization has assumed its responsibility and participated in every charitable and civic activity in our community, all of which, I think, has been generally recognized."

"I have given much of my time and energy to help accomplish the many benefits we now enjoy and I believe this is a good time to give other members, who have been so faithful in their support, an opportunity to carry on. For that reason, I hereby resign as president, to take effect immediately."

"Respectfully yours,
"PETER KERESMAN."

The Patrolmen took no action on the resignation, tabling it until the July meeting.

Animals Have Businesses

The following story, notes the New York Sun, comes from a newspaper published in 1802:

"Nearly all animals carry on a regular business and in their variety represent various trades among men. There are no better geometers among men than bees. Their cells are so constructed that with the least quantity of material they have the largest sized spaces and the least possible interstices. The mole is a meteorologist. The bird called the nighthawk is an arithmetician; also the crow, the wild turkey, and other birds. The torpedo, the ray, and the electric eel are electricians. The nautilus is a navigator. He raises and lowers his sails, casts and weighs anchor and performs nautical feats. Whole tribes of birds are musicians."

"The beaver is an architect, builder and wood-cutter. He cuts down trees and erects houses and dams. The marmot is a civil engineer. He not only builds houses, but constructs aqueducts and drains to keep them dry. The ant maintains a regular standing army. Wasps are paper manufacturers. Caterpillars are silk-spinners. The squirrel is a ferryman. With a chip or a piece of bark for a boat, and his tail for a sail, he crosses a stream. Dogs, wolves, jackals, and many others, are hunters."

Playing Card Pictures Represented Personages

Marks upon the suits of cards were supposed to have been the symbolic representation of the different classes of society. The hearts stood for the clergy, clubs for the soldiery, spades for the serfs, and diamonds for the merchants. According to records, observed a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, the pictures represented actual personages. The kings in the early French cards were David, Alexander, Caesar and Charlemagne, being the respective representatives of the Jewish, Greek, Roman and French monarchies; the queens were Argine, Esther, Judith, Pallas.

The marks on the suits of cards have undergone various changes. In the earliest European cards (made in Germany) are hearts, bells, leaves and acorns; Italian cards had swords, batons, cups and money. The club of the modern card is derived from the trefoil, a French design. The court cards at first were the king, chequer and knave. The queen was first substituted for the chequer by the Italians.

Jesse Jones in Plane Crash Near Dallas

Dallas, Tex., June 13. (AP)—Four airplane passengers who lived through a flaming dive from a mile in the sky—among them Jesse Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation—were praised by two seriously burned pilots today for being "cool as cucumbers."

Jones and his party, in turn, gave Pilots Ed Hefley and Eugene Schacher full credit for saving them from a fiery death. The other passengers were former Governor W. P. and Mrs. Hobby and Joe Toomey, Jones's secretary.

After a "belly" landing that tore out the ship's motor in a plowed field, Jones called it a "beautiful" landing—the chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation dragged Hefley from the blazing cabin.

Fifty-five students of the Binnewater-Cottick School held their annual picnic at Williams Lake in Binnewater Friday and enjoyed a program of water sports and playground sports arranged by Charles Henke and Fred Dippel, directors of the beach and the playground.

Demonstrations in life-saving and artificial respiration were given to the group by Henke and Dippel, who are examiners for the American Red Cross. Five of the students, Harry Williams, Wilbur Wiesler, William Nyström and Raymond Williams, passed the summer's test for beginners as outlined by the American Red Cross. They were awarded emblems for their accomplishments.

Mrs. E. Kennedy and Mrs. E. R. Basten, teachers in the school, were in charge of the group.

Roosevelt Turns Eastward on Trip

Fort Worth, Tex., June 13. (AP)—President Roosevelt turned eastward on his 4,000-mile western trip today after frankly stating his views on some of the live national and international questions of the day before centennial-celebrating Texas and Arkansas.

He planned to leave this afternoon for Vincennes, Ind., where tomorrow morning he will deliver the third major address of his tour, dedicating a monument to George Rogers Clark, northwest Revolutionary war hero. He spent the night here at the nearby home of his son, Elliott.

In two speeches at the Texas centennial at Dallas yesterday, the chief executive again talked freely about current problems.

After a hard-hitting anti-monopoly speech in the Dallas Cotton Bowl Stadium, where his visible audience was estimated at 50,000, he told a downtown hotel luncheon in his honor that foreign nations that "think of armament and war" could expect nothing but "moral help" from the United States in settling their difficulties.

"We are not going to get tangled up in their troubles in the days to come," he said.

Pastor McGrath Faces Charge he Has no Right To Belong to Socialists

About 30 attended the Socialism meeting in the Uptown Community Center, Franklin and Fair streets, Friday night, when two speakers, introduced by the Rev. Howard D. McGrath, pastor of the Clinton Avenue M. E. Church, who presided, explained points of Socialism.

The speakers were Alfred Jones of New York, who lived in Germany prior to and following the Nazi movement, and Frank N. Trager, state secretary of the Socialist party. After their talks some of the group in attendance signed to join what the speakers hope will be the nucleus of the party here.

An unidentified man arose after Mr. Trager's talk and asked, "How is it you allow men of the cloth (clergymen) to join the Socialist Party?" he said. "I understand Socialism is purely a materialistic philosophy."

Clergymen are considered eligible, answered Mr. Trager, inasmuch as it is their duty to "reach the everyday man with a social gospel."

The Rev. Mr. McGrath intimated the interrogator would not need to ask such a question if he attended church regularly, and asked him if he was a church member. The man, who said he was from New York, told the minister he did not attend church because he had been disillusioned "long enough."

Another preacher at the meeting was Rabbi Herbert I. Bloom of Temple Emanuel, but he attended only as a listener.

Mr. Jones in his talk favored a reformist rather than purely Socialist application to government in behalf of the working man and farmer. Said he, "Socialistic government is an integrated understanding. We've got to learn how to go about our tasks realistically."

Two Boys Start For Chicago With $2 Bill

Friday afternoon the police department was notified that John Olsen, 13, of 136 Cedar street, and Robert Harvey, 13, of 135 Greenkill Avenue, were missing from home, and asking that the police locate the missing boys. They had with them a $2 bill.

A general alarm was sent out but it was not until late morning that Officers Fitzgerald and Murphy in one of the radio cars found the boys at the incinerating plant on Wilbur Avenue. The boys said they had slept at the plant over night, and were on their way to Chicago.

They had $1.15 left of the $2 bill, having spent 85 cents and had gotten but a few blocks from their homes.

The two boys were returned to their homes by the officers.
